NEW COURT HOUSE

Question Being Discussed by Many of Our Citizens.

It was remarked by a citizen who lives out in the county, last week while in town, that "there is no doubt but what the MOUNTAIN ADVOCATE is educating the people to the fact that we must have a new Court House, and if the 'knocking' is kept up, it is sure to come."

This is a bit encouraging. We have done our best to convince the public of the importance of this step. Everyone knows the need of it. We have from time to time, pointed out the facts and made it so clear that any man in Knox county who will take a glance at the old Court House and consider for a moment the condition in which everything in connection with it is, will be forced to admit the fact that a new court house is very badly needed.

Judge Faulkner has given numerous lectures from the bench to the grand juries regarding the court house and as yet there is no visible steps taken to get a better one.

At the opening of court last week the Judge assured the jury and everyone present after again urging upon them the importance of building the new court house that "if the work is undertaken while he is on the bench that he will see to it that no one gets a 'graft' out of it, that the people's money shall be judiciously expended and that we get value received."

Now why not begin at once and have the vote taken to issue bonds and build the new court house while we have such assurances as these? Our county is out of debt and abundantly able to erect a new court house in keeping with the times and one that would be a credit instead of a disgrace to our county, and at the same time one that would be serviceable for all purposes for which it is intended. This can be done and paid for without taxing the people sufficiently to be felt.

We believe that the bonds, if voted on and carried, could be sold and redeemed and no man in the county would ever notice any change in his tax rates.

By tearing away the old building and using the material in the new building, it would only require a few thousand dollars and by allowing say ten years in which to redeem the bonds, the debt would be paid off and no one would ever feel the burden.

Then think of the satisfaction we all would derive from the new Court House. Instead of having the finger of scorn pointed at it and hearing the remarks that "Knox county has the 'worst' Court House of any county in the mountains of Kentucky" we would hear it said that "Knox county has the best, most serviceable, most comfortable and attractive Court House in the mountains of Kentucky, and it is a credit to her citizens."

Now let's have the Court House and enjoy it while we live and at the same time show to the outside world that we have enough pride and energy to want to keep abreast with the outside world, and that we propose to do it.

LEXINGTON HERALD

To Change Hands and Become Consolidated With the Morning Democrat.

News comes from Lexington, that Editor Walton of the Morning Democrat is negotiating for the purchase of the Morning Herald plant, and will consolidate the two papers and publish the consolidated paper from the present office of the Herald.

Desha Breckinridge, the present Manager of the Herald will retire from the newspaper work and resume the practice of law. The Herald today is recognized as one of the leading daily papers of the State but in the death of Col. W. C. Breckinridge as chief Editor it lost its lustre and no man can take his place and so ably perform that duty.

The consolidation of the two papers will materially strengthen the Democrat but will not materially strengthen the Herald.

This will leave only two daily papers in Lexington, and the footing that the Leader now has with the Honorable Samuel Judson Roberts, at the helm will remain unshaken and he will continue to preach the true doctrine of Republicanism to the people of Kentucky in a way that will have a telling effect.

OVERSEERS

Of Our County Roads Who Have Neglected Their Official Duty Are Indicted.

There has been a great deal of complaint coming from different sections of the county concerning the condition of the county roads and the neglect of the Overseers in having them properly worked. The Court called the attention of the grand jury to this fact and we are informed that there have been a number of road Overseers indicted.

We do not rejoice at the troubles of anyone, and regret that the Overseers of the roads of Knox county have been so neglectful of their duty as to make this step necessary, but the people of this county are deserving of good roads and if it takes this kind of action to secure the desired results, we are glad that we have officials at the head of the county's affairs of our county who will not shrink from their duty, and through them we can have recourse and secure the desired results.

We hope that this will prove a warning to all, and we further hope to see every road in the county put in good condition for travel at once.

If the Overseers will not do their duty without it we trust that the fines imposed upon them by the jury will be such that they will not soon forget it, and in this way if in no other, succeed in getting for our county a system of good roads.

THE WATER WORKS

Proposition Begins to Look Like Business.

One of the important improvements that we have all long insisted upon our town making is that of establishing a good system of Water-works. We have urged this because of the fact that the town needs it and can hardly do without it in numerous ways the most important being the protection it would afford against the ravages of fire not to speak of the satisfaction it would afford our citizens to have an inexhaustible supply of water for the watering of their lawns, flowers, gardens, etc. and for sprinkling the streets during the hot, dry weather Summer in and by no means least the pleasure of having the water conveniences for bathing purpose where one can bathe and refresh themselves often. This is very essential to health and all of these advantages are at our hand if we will only secure a good water-works system.

Our City Council has consented to sell the franchise for this plant and to that end have inserted the sale notice, elsewhere in this issue. We have no doubt but what some one will buy the franchise and if proper arrangements can be reached with the Council the plant will soon be installed in our town. This we also believe will be done, as the City Clerk has been able by facts and figures to show to the Council where the city is now abundantly able to subscribe and pay for 80 fire plugs and pay for them as the rate of $25.00 each per year and still have sufficient money left for the running expenses of the city.

This being the case then the Water-works can then be put in and the Company behind the project will take the chances of securing enough service from

DISASTROUS

CONFLAGRATION.

"Queen City" Hotel Entirely Consumed by Fire Early Yesterday Morning.

Fire Started Near the Roof About Four O'clock and as There Were no Water Facilities For Fighting the Flames, the Citizens Were Forced to Stand and Look on While Flames Consumed the Entire Building.

Yesterday morning at 4 o'clock the fire whistle sounded at the electric light plant any many of the citizens of the town arose earlier than usual to learn that the "Queen City" Hotel was on fire.

The fire was first discovered by Marian Richardson, who lives near, before it had gained any headway. He ran to the hotel and aroused the inmates, and they all succeeded in saving all the furniture.

There were about three different families living in the building, which was a large three and one half story frame, erected during the boom days of the eighties, and cost, when built, $15,000.

The building was a handsome structure in its day, and finished throughout with hardwood and would have been a credit to any town.

Since the boom days there has been a great falling off in the value of the property, and only last summer this property was sold for about $4,700.

The building belonged to Mr. George Smith, who carried $3,000 insurance on it.

A large crowd soon gathered at the scene of the conflagration, but after the household effects were removed they could do nothing but stand and watch the flames lick up the entire building.

Fortunately there was no other buildings situated sufficiently near to catch fire, and the flames exhausted themselves on the one building and burned themselves out.

The fire is only an evidence of what we have all along contended, that should a fire start there would be no way to control it without a system of water-works.

Had our town been properly equipped for fire protection this fire could have been extinguished with only a trifling loss; whereas there was almost enough on this one building to have installed a water-works plant in the town.

How long will the citizens slumber and delay in the matter of giving protection to us that we so much?

Some day we will stand by and see the entire business part of the town laid in ashes, and all for the lack of enough enterprise to even permit some one else who is willing to invest their money in a good cause if the franchise privileges were granted them, who would install the necessary water system for us.

Let's take the warning given in this lesson and prepare for the future before it is too late.

the citizens to justify them to install the water plant. We feel hopeful that the dawn of a new life in our town is about to break in upon us and that with the coming of the Water works will also come the Steam Laundry and many other useful and necessary improvements and our town will soon be recognized as one of the best, if not the best town in the mountains of Kentucky.

TOTAL VOTE

In Presidential and Congressional Races.

The total vote cast in the Presidential and Congressional races was announced by Secretary of State McChesney last week after the arrival of the belated Harrison county vote, tied up in the recent injunction suits in the Ninth Congressional district. Takes the Cake.

We clip the following from the Mt. Olive Tribune, which we give to our readers and they can form their own conclusions. It says:

"A novel and successful plan to secure water during these droughty times was adopted by Postmaster Young. He was told that if he would put a cake of corn-bread in one of his sunken and dry springs, the crawfish would work their way up to the surface to partake of the bread, and that the vein of water would follow them. Mr. Young tried the experiment a few evenings since, and was surprised the next morning to find his pool filled with water. This beats going to the expense of employing a drilling outfit to bore as a water producer."

England, Ellison & Co. claim to have sold more cloaks this season than for many seasons passed.

R. W. Cole has a choice selection of Christmas presents, and those desiring to get choice should hurry, as they are going rapidly.

Mrs. M. B. Cole returned last Saturday morning from a ten days' visit to Virginia, where she visited relatives and her old home. While there she met friends and relatives whom she had not seen since her girlhood days.

Leap year will soon be gone and the girls who fail to make use of the remaining few days may have to wait for four more years for the opportunity that still awaits them. Hurry girls, do not wait and be doomed to four years of going it alone.

We call attention of our readers to the advertisement of Parker & Parker in this issue. They have a nice line of goods and are selling strictly for cash. Give them a call and you will be convinced that their prices, as well as their goods, are right.

Santa Claus has taken up his headquarters at A. N. Herndon's Store where the little folks can find a nice selection for Christmas toys such as dolls sleds and many other items to numerous to mention. You will have to see them to appreciate the nice selection in stock there to select from.

Baby Burned.

The two-year-old baby boy of William Fisher living on Little Highland creek three miles from town was severely burned by falling in the fire. One arm and the face was badly burned. Dr. Lock was called and dressed the burns.

Watch the columns of the ADVOCATE to see where you can get your Christmas bargains. All the wide-awake merchants are using space with us and inviting you to visit them. Observe this admonition; don't go where you are not invited when you receive an invitation every week to trade with the best merchants in town.

We invite the attention of our readers this week to the large display of the Costello Drug Co., which appears in this issue.

They have a choice selection of Christmas goods suitable for holiday presents, and those desiring to give presents to their friends should not fail to inspect this selection before purchasing.

Young Garvey who is employed as pumpman on the Miller lease while pumping oil a few days ago had his face severely burned with gas. While reading by the boiler the gas formed in the fire box and puffed out burning him severely and setting the oil on fire. The oil was soon extinguished and Garvey was hurried to a physician who immediately dressed his burns and he is again able to go about.

Caught Hawk in Bonnet.

The Larue Herald is responsible for the following story. It says:

"Mrs. John Hart of near Tontieville, had an unusual experience with a large hawk a few days ago. She went out into the yard and saw a large hawk on top of one of her largest chickens, with its talons buried in to the chicken, preparatory to carrying it off for a feast. But the chicken was too large for the hawk to carry it away against its will, and it was not inclined to be a party, at the hawk's dinner, with the hawk the master of ceremonies. Consequently the hawk was unable to rise from the ground with its victim, and Mrs. Hart went to the chicken's defense. She started to the house for the gun but the hawk suddenly let go of the chicken, which ran away, and Mrs. Hart pulled off her bonnet and throw it over the hawk captured it and carried it into the house and bound it with twine until her husband came home. It was a very large hawk and able to put up a good fight."

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN.

A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

THE WIFE TO HER HUSBAND.

Linger not long. Home is not home without thee:
Its dearest tokens do but make me mourn.

O, let its memory, like a chain about thee,
Gently compel and hasten thy return!

Linger not long. Though crowds should woo thy staying,
Bethink thee, can the birth of friends, though dear,
Compensate for the grief thy long delaying.

Costs the fond heart that sighs to have thee here?

Linger not long. How shall I watch thy coming?
As evening shadows stretch o'er moor and dell

When the wild bee hath ceased her busy humming
And silence hangs on all things like a spell!

How shall I watch for thee, when fears grow stronger?
As night grows dark and darker on the hill!

How shall I weep, when I can wait no longer!
Ah! art thou absent, art thou absent still?

Yet I shall grieve not though the eye that seeth me
Gleameth through tears that make its splendor dull;

For O, I sometimes fear when thou art with me
My cup of happiness is all too full.

Haste, haste thee home unto thy mountain dwelling,
Haste, as a bird unto its peaceful nest!

Haste, as a skiff through tempest wild and swelling,
Flies to its haven of securest rest!

A PICTURE FROM REAL LIFE.

A comfortable home with nothing more than ordinary surroundings, but an attractive daughter carefully and christially reared. From the outside world comes in a man with nothing but money—unless you count profanity and selfishness and fondness for champagne and general recklessness as a part of his professions. He has his coat collar turned up when there is no chill in the air, but because it gives him an air of abandon; and eye glass, not because he is near-sighted, but because it gives him a classical appearance, and with an attire somewhat loud, a cane thick enough to be the club of Hercules and clutched at the middle, his conversation interlarded with French phrases inaccurately pronounced. By arts learned of the devil he insinuates himself into the affections of the daughter of that christian home. Reports come in that the young man is fast in his habits; that he has broken several young hearts and that he is selfish and cruel. But all this is covered up with the fact that he has several houses in his own name and large deposits at the bank. The marriage day comes and goes. The wedding ring was costly enough and the orange blossoms fragrant enough and the benediction solemn enough. Now see them in their new home. He turns out to be a tyrant. Instead of the kind words she left behind in her former home, now their are complaints and fault findings and curses. He is the master and she is the slave. Can halls of mosaic, cold violins played by an Ole ball or pianos fingered by a Gottschalk make a wife in such a companionship happy? Imprisoned in a castle! Her gold bracelets are the chains of a lifelong servitude. Her wardrobe is full of shrouds for deaths which she dies daily. Before things are right in this world, genteel villains are to be expurgated. Instead of being welcomed into respectable society because of the amount of medals and estates they represent, they ought to be ligumated two or three years before they are allowed to put their hand on the door knob of a moral house. The time must come when a masculine estray. All the money or social position a bad man brings to woman in marriage is a splendid despair, a prolonged death. Consent not to join one of the many regiments of women who have married for worldly success without regard to moral character.

DISAPPOINTMENTS DESTROY HEALTH.

PRACTICAL religion is a friend of longevity in a fact that it is a potent against disappointments which injure and destroy the health. Bad men and women live a very short life. Their sins kill them. You all know many good old men and but very few bad old men. Why? Bad men seldom live to get old. Lord Byron died at Misooloughi at thirty-six years of age, himself his own Mazerpa, his unbridled passions the horse that dashed with him into the desert. Edgar Allen Poe died at Baltimore at thirty-eight years of age. The black raven that alighted on the bust above his chamber door was delirium tremens.

Only this and nothing more.

Napoleon Bonaparte lived only just beyond mid-life, and died at St. Helena, and one of his doctors said that his disease was induced by excessive snuffing. You have known many people who have not lived out half their days on account of their dissipations and indulgences. Now practical religion is a protest against all dissipation of all kind.

But you say professors of religion have fallen, professors of religion have got drunk, professors of religion have been misappropriated trust funds, professors of religion have absconded. This is all true but they threw away their religion before did these evil acts. If a man on a White Star Line steamer bound for Liverpool in mid-Atlantic jumps overboard and is drowned, is that anything against the White Star Line's capacity to take the man across the ocean? And if a man jumps over the gunwale of his religion and goes down never to rise, is that any reason for your believing that religion has no capacity to take the man clear through? In the one case if he had kept to the steamer his body would have been saved; in the other case if he had kept to his religion his morals would have been saved.

THERE are a great many who try to feed their soul on infidelity mixed with truth. They say the Bible has good things in it, but it is not inspired. They say Christ was a good man, but He was not inspired, and that religion is made up of ten degrees of humanitarianism, and ten degrees of egotism with one degree of gospel truth, and on a poor, miserable cult they make their immortal soul stew, while the meadows of God's world are green and luxuriant with well-watered pastures. Did you ever see a happy infidel? Did you ever meet a pined skeptic? Did you ever meet a contented atheist? Not one. From the days of Gilgamesh Voltaire down, not one. They quarrel about each other. They take all the divine teachings, and gather them together, and under them they put the fire of their own wit, and scorn and sarcasm and then they dance in the light of that blaze and they scratch amid the rubbish for something with which to help them in the days of trouble, and something to comfort them in the days of death. Find not Voltaire declared: "This gloom seems to me more like a collection of carcasses than of men. I wish I never had been born."

Circuit Court.

There has been to all appearances very little done in court since our last report.

The Grand Jury made its final report last Saturday to the Court and was excused from further service. Contrary to the expectation of many the Grand Jury failed to indict anyone in connection with the recent elections, although the Court had given very strict instructions along that line.

Monday morning the case of the Commonwealth versus Pal Carnes, charged with murder, was begun.

It will be remembered that Pal Carnes and Jim Gray were the two men who shot Clark and John Mills at Henry Mills' store on Stinking creek last spring.

The case was finally submitted to the jury on Wednesday morning, and after being out twenty-four hours, brought in a verdict of guilty, and fixed his punishment at eight years in the penitentiary.

The case of Thomas Aslinger, for shooting and wounding, with intent to kill, not guilty.

SOUTHERN MEN

Teach the Nation How to Farm.

We have been so long accustomed to look to northern writers for our best educational books that it is decidedly a cause for satisfaction to have our own authors sought for by the leading publishers of school-books. But the recent book lists do show that Southern authors are contributing more and more to the broad national educational literature.

A late addition to the school-books which are the product of Southern brains is a volume on agriculture by Professors Burkett, Stevens, and Hill of the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. It may seem remarkable to some that the South, which is supposed to know how to produce but a few staple crops that are particularly suited to its climate and soil, should be called upon to instruct the whole nation, including the great northern belt with its much vaunted diversified farming. But the excellence of southern farming is more widely recognized than we have realized. It was not very long ago that a northern farming expert was heard to remark that the best farm journal in the country, both in matter and appearance, is published in the South and its contributors are Southern men.

We do not know how it was that Ginn and Company, the Boston school-book publishers, came to select these North Carolina professors to write this new book on 'Agriculture,' but it is admitted on all sides, north, south, east and west, that they have succeeded in giving the main principles of agriculture in a nutshell. They have given such a combination of scientific and practical knowledge of agriculture as has never before been brought within such a small compass. The book is called 'Agriculture for Beginners,' and while simple enough for a youth to comprehend, yet it is packed full of information of value to the practical farmer. Everybody on a farm or plantation should read the book; and if his big brother, or father, or uncle gets a copy into his hands he, too, will find it highly interesting reading. The practical farmer who has done some deep thinking about the now and the results of farming will find on every page of this handbook explanations of the why. In reading this little book the old farmer will exclaim time and again: 'Well, that explains it. I never knew just how it was before.'

The book will interest every farmer's boy in his work, and will give him new ideas enough to last him a lifetime. It will start the young farmer to thinking for himself and offers sprouts of information which, if followed up, will grow into trees of knowledge.

Not only is the reading matter clear, concise and explanatory, but the beautiful illustrations are so apt and suggestive that there is not much to hope for in the country boy, or man either, who fails to receive inspiration from them.

This book tells first about soils—the various kinds, how they originated, and how they may be improved. Next is taken up the relation of the soil to the plant and how the former supplies food to plant foods. Then follows a description of the action of the plant above ground and its relation to its environment.

This includes the manner in which plants feed on air, how the sap flows, and how plants are propagated.

Under the subject of fruit trees, grafting, budding, planting and pruning are fully treated.

But perhaps the most interesting useful sections are those treating of the diseases of plants and insects that are found in the orchard, garden and field. Farm crops, domestic animals, farm dairying and the general life in the country complete the book, which all in all is the most charming volume that has appeared on agriculture, and without it is authoritative and up to date in its information and methods.
